

The National Predator Hunters Association is a non-profit organization developed to unite predator callers through education and advocacy, while promoting the camaraderie of organized events.

Predator hunting is a challenging and increasingly popular hobby. Unfortunately many aspects of our hunting and trapping heritages have become less active in recent years with a decreasing recruitment of new participants and increased regulation in many areas. Predator calling is unique, in that it has spread across the country like wildfire with increasing predator populations, fairly accessible land to hunt and relaxed regulations. Where will it all go from here? Is ours a viable pastime without any structure or advocacy long term? What will come of the inevitable “change” in the future?

The National Predator Hunters Association has been developed by a cross section of forward thinking staff and well-seasoned advisors to address these concerns. The combined NPHA staff represents former founders and leaders of honorable calling, trapping and hunting organizations coupled with the developers of some of today's popular non-profit websites and hunting events. With a solid lesson in history and a sharp eye on its future, the NPHA steps forward to address tomorrow's predator hunting issues and opportunities with your support! Guidance and input from advisors within upstanding organizations like RMEF, NTA, FTA and NRA have tempered the core of the National Predator Hunters Association for long term strength and viability in today's ever-changing society. Please consider joining us today!
